TextEdit is a simple text editor that comes standard on all Apple Macintosh computers. Following a few simple steps, you can use the TextEdit program to create and save PHP files. PHP is a server-side programming language that is used in conjunction with HTML to enhance the characteristics of a website. If the TextEdit icon is on the dock, as it is when the computer is uploaded, just click the icon to start TextEdit. Otherwise, open a Finder window by clicking the Finder icon on the dock. Choose Applications from the menu on the left. In the list of apps on the right side of the screen, browse and double-click TextEdit. From the Format menu at the top of the screen, choose Make Flat Text. If you do not see this option, but see "Make Enriched Text", the document is already configured for plain text. Select Preferences from the TextEdit menu at the top of the screen. Click on the New Document tab and confirm that the option button next to "Flat Text" is selected. Click the Open and Save tab and confirm the box next to "Show HTML files as HTML code instead of text formatted HTML instead of text" is checked. Enter the PHP code in TextEdit. Choose Save from the File menu. Enter your file name.php into the Save As field, making sure to include the .php extension. Click the Save button. If a popup asks you if you want to use .txt or .php as the file extension, click the Use .php button. You cannot test your PHP code in TextEdit. You can test it in PHP if you have it on your Mac, or you can download an emulator application from the Mac App Store, PHP Code Tester, PHP Runner and qPHP can be used to test the accuracy of your code. Simply copy it from the TextEdit File and paste it on the application screen. PHP is a language of On the side of the server that is used together with HTML to improve the features of a website. O, then, what can be done with PHP? Here are 10 fun and useful things that you can use PHP on your website. You can use PHP to create a special area of your website for members. You you Allow users to register and then use the registration information to start session on their site. All the information of the users is stored in a MySQL database with encrypted passwords. You can use PHP to find today's date and then build a calendar for the month. You can also generate a calendar around a specified date. A calendar can be used as an independent script or incorporating it to other scripts where the dates are important. Report users the last time they visited their website. PHP can do this by storing a cookie in the user's browser. When they return, you can read the cookie and remind them that the last time they visited was two weeks ago. Whether you want to redirect users from an old page of your site that no longer exists on a new page on your site, or if you want to give them a shorter URL to remember, PHP can be used to redirect to the Users All redirection information is made on the server side, so it is smaller than redirecting with HTML. Use PHP to allow your visitors to participate in a survey. You can also use the GD library with PHP to show the results of your survey visually instead of simply listing the results in text. If you like to reduce the aspect of your site often or want to keep the content cool on all the pages, then this is for you. Keeping all the designer code of your site in separate files, you can make your PHP files access the same design. This means that when you make a change, you just need to update a file and all your pages change. By Michael Davidson I Computer Image by Ewe Degiampietro From Fotolia.com The PHP file extension is usually used by web design in the creation of interactive websites. PHP scripts can process online forms, access database information, and the appropriate day and hour. PHP files are usually an "under-the-cap" program, in which the web server takes the code and converts it into the HTML that people see on their screen. There are several ways to access PHP programming. Adobe Dreamweaver is a web design program that very effective for reading and playing PHP files. Dreamweaver is one of the most popular web design programs in the world and can be used to create, edit and delete various web programs and files that create a web page. Dreamweaver MX can be used to write and create PHP applications and can open and read pre-existing applications. Just open the file you need to view and Dreamweaver will read it and convert it to a readable format so that you can read the code. If you are simply trying to see the end result of the PHP programming and not edit it, any web browser should be able to open and play the PHP files as long as there are no errors in the programming. If PHP scripts have bugs in them, the browser will probably not play the file or will display an error message. Otherwise, the browser will open the PHP files when the web server converts them into HTML encoding that the browser can read. Just go to the website that has the PHP files in question and the browser should open it. If the file is really on your computer, use a browser to open it and you may still be able to view it, depending on the browser. browser.
